THE ROCK ISLAND FIRE.

The fire at the Rock Island freight depot building yesterday morning made a clean company, he left the building near a half nour before he saw the fire. While at the building he extinguished the lamp and fixed the fire in the stove. Leaving that building he started to the passenger depot building, and when near it heard an explosion in the direction of the freight depot, He looked back and saw a light but did not think it was in the freight building. Waiting a few minutes he found out where it was. Being assured where it was he ran to a neighboring telephone and sent in the

His roommate, Mr. Betts, said he passed the night without showing any us of sections illness, When awoke about 7:30, he said he would not get up for awhile as it was a very wet, disagreeable day. Mr. Jones, the man employed in the office, afterwards heard him breathing apparently with great difficulty; and upon the advice of a gentleman who called at the office, a physician was summoned.
