Daniel Webster at Saratoga.

The Hon. DANIEL WEBSTER returned on Saturday from Saratoga—tired, fatigued and worn out after the sojourn of a week at that crowded and fashionable watering place.

New Political Movements.—Commencement of the Organization for the Fall Campaign.

The election being by general ticket, the results to each party are fraught with most important consequences.

The recent results, so favorable to the cause of General Harrison, have been brought about entirely by the agency of these Tippecanoe Clubs.

Medical gentlemen continued their efforts to restore life until hope expired.

Several bodies were recovered within five minutes after the fall, and we can only account for the abortiveness of every effort to resuscitate life by supposing that the persons lost were injured by the fall or wounded before they sunk.

Among the citizens who made praiseworthy efforts to save lives and recover bodies, were Col. Grosbeck, Robert L. Keenan, John McCordie, Edward Brinkerhoff, S. M. Fish, J. E. Gavit, David Terry, Jr., Elijah Brainard, and several others whose names do not occur to us.

Further Particulars.—We are informed by a gentleman who came from Albany on the boat last evening, that ten additional bodies had been recovered making an aggregate of twenty-eight deaths by this shocking accident.

Another St. Paul.—The Rev. Mr. Choules, an eloquent preacher of the Baptist Church, preached twice yesterday, at the Church in Sixth street, near the Bowery.

Musical.—We understand that Signor Joseph Hoxie, of this city, made a very successful debut as a hard elder vocalist, before a fashionable audience in one of the drawing rooms at Saratoga.

Death of Timothy Flint.—Mr. Flint, the author of "Ten Years' Recollection in the Valley of the Mississippi," died at Reading, Mass., on Tuesday last.

Letters by the President.—The package of letters received by this steam ship, and sent to the Custom House, was not addressed to Gilpin's News Rooms, as many have supposed.

Horrible Disaster!—Fall of the Draw of the State street Canal Basin Bridge at Albany.

Our city is the scene of a most distressing and calamitous dispensation. At 5 o'clock this afternoon, just as the steamboats were departing for New York, and when hundreds of people were crossing the bridge over the Canal Basin, the draw broke, and precipitated from seventy to eighty persons, and three or four horses and carts into the basin!

Samuel Fisher, lamplighter, of this city. Francis Rogee, laborer, of this city. Wood, a boy about 14 years old, of this city.

Thomas McDowell, of this city. William L. Morey, of Vermont. H. L. Hoffman, of Fultonville. Smith Matthews, of Troy.

A part of the draw fell after most of the sufferers were in the water, from which many were injured. Others were wounded by the struggling horses.

Captain Jacobs, of the boat Col. Little John, who was assisting with the insane man, though in the midst of this destructive scene, was saved.

James Henry, book seller, fell outside of the crowd, and saved himself. Among the hats recovered, was one with a letter directed to "J. Nathan Hart."

Mr. Carr, of the Pearl street House, was slightly injured but saved himself. Thomas Greene, of the firm of Rathbone, Chapin & Greene, who was surrounded by struggling men and horses, swam out.

A young man (Samuel H. Ransom,) saved himself and old man who was exhausted and sinking. Mr. Wilson, of Juliet, Illinois, son of J. Q. Wilson, of this city, swam out.

Capt. Morgan, of a canal boat, saved himself. A man, whose name we could not learn, was saved by breaking across.

Daniel Gavit, engraver, swam out. Several cartmen, among whom we recognized David Terry, John W. Butler, Charles Rock, John Stackpole and Peter Simonds, saved themselves and horses.

This dreadful loss of life was occasioned by the refractory conduct of the insane man who was refusing to go with his keeper.

A large number of citizens continued their search for the bodies until dark. Several missing persons are supposed to be numbered among the dead.

Medical gentlemen continued their efforts to restore life until hope expired. All their exertions were unavailing.

Several bodies were recovered within five minutes after the fall, and we can only account for the abortiveness of every effort to resuscitate life by supposing that the persons lost were injured by the fall or wounded before they sunk.

Our Medical men, among whom we noticed Dr. Cogswell, Arns, Arns, Van Olinda, M'Noughton, Hinckley and others, were prompt and efficient in their efforts to restore life.

The Mayor, who was early on the spot, assisted to save two boys who were nearly exhausted.

Among the citizens who made praiseworthy efforts to save lives and recover bodies, were Col. Grosbeck, Robert L. Keenan, John McCordie, Edward Brinkerhoff, S. M. Fish, J. E. Gavit, David Terry, Jr., Elijah Brainard, and several others whose names do not occur to us.

Important from Morocco.

The following intelligence, which has been forwarded us by a private correspondent from Africa, will be read with interest at this particular juncture.

The affairs of Europe present the most singular aspect imaginable. From the subjoined letter it is very evident that the Emperor of Russia is secretly conspiring with the Emperor of Morocco and Abd-el-Kader against the interests of the French in Africa.

The Russian army is near Khiva, and the British army is at Herat, (but 10 or 12 days ride asunder) approaching each other with the most hostile attitude imaginable, to contend for the possession and sovereignty of the East.

It is well known that assistance has been furnished in arms, money and ammunition to the Algerines, from Morocco, and the French have made strong and repeated remonstrances upon the subject.

By far the most important news is that just received by express from the court at Morocco, announcing the emperor's intention to visit his southern seaports immediately, with a numerous army.

His principal theme was the currency; the acts of General Jackson in his crusade against the U. S. Bank, and the tampering with the currency, and consequent distress, &c.; but contended that neither General Jackson nor any of his predecessors had ever denied the obligation of government, but he said Mr. Van Buren, finding the difficulty of regulating it too great, had at least "I may say, escaped."

It was a heartless reply to the distress of the people, the government must take care of itself, and the people of themselves. The result of tampering with the currency, and then refusing to regulate it, had been the cause of general distress.

The Mass Meeting at Saratoga.—Mr. Webster and his Speech.—A Breakdown.—The Company at the Springs.

This has been a very exciting day at Saratoga, in the village and at the hotels, and among all the people now here.

As to our commercial affairs, they are in a pretty good condition. The exports of wool, and some manufactured articles have fallen, but the imports from Gibraltar are about the same.

Notwithstanding that all our merchants here think that they are doing pretty well, I am perfectly astonished when I consider the enormous resources for trade of this empire, that more is not done.

The Barbadoes.—The Barbadoes Globe of the 25th of June, has the following:—A bottle containing the following memorandum, was picked up on the East Coast of Trinidad on the 5th of May.

This bottle was put overboard, March 18th, 1840, on the Equator, long. 39 05, west from Greenwich, from the barque Coosa, from Rio de Janeiro, for Philadelphia.—Joseph Hand and Sheppard Gandy, of Philadelphia, owners; Andrew Daniel Gnodal, of Tenerife, and Robert Clinton Yates, of Rio de Janeiro, passengers; D. B. Moore, master, Francis Swift, first mate, and George Brown, second mate.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Aug. 20, 1840.

Dear Sir—The great movement in politics has kept on increasing, until it reached its climax yesterday with Mr. Webster's great speech to an enormous multitude.

On Monday General Wilson, of New Hampshire, made a capital speech in the grove on Congress Hill, to a very large audience.

He complained that the enormous sums of money used by government were "thrown into the hopper of the Sub-Treasury mill, where the Sub-Treasurers, not content with a reasonable toll, stole the whole grain."

Yesterday morning, people began to pour in from all quarters at an early hour. The farmers in their wagons from every point, and by every road, some in wagons drawn by six horses, with music and banners, such as "Clifton Park, First Independence 1776, and Second 1840."

It was very hot, but a heavy shower cleared the air and moderated the weather, and some got woefully wet; one fair damsel came, with her wet garments, displaying the contour and symmetry of her limbs, and the rouge from her cheeks running down her neck and bosom.

It was most interesting, clear, convincing and beautiful thing I ever listened to. Not one of these speeches which, speaking to the passions, carries away the hearer with the speaker, only to fall back when the excitement ceases; but a speech which will be remembered and treasured by thousands, as the creed and text book of their political faith.

His principal theme was the currency; the acts of General Jackson in his crusade against the U. S. Bank, and the tampering with the currency, and consequent distress, &c.; but contended that neither General Jackson nor any of his predecessors had ever denied the obligation of government.

It was a heartless reply to the distress of the people, the government must take care of itself, and the people of themselves. The result of tampering with the currency, and then refusing to regulate it, had been the cause of general distress.

apprehensions were entertained that Congress would be drunk dry. Many were searching for dinner; and some thought at one time of seizing the big show on here, and roasting him whole.

The meeting was held in the grove near the spring. At about four o'clock in the evening, Mr. Webster made his appearance on the stand, and was received with loud acclamation.

He confined himself principally to facts, which he elucidated in the happiest manner. He spoke of the state of the nation—the awful depression of things—and the remedy; and he spoke convincingly.

CAMP MEETING IN NEW JERSEY.

MADISON, N. J., August 20, 1840.

My DEAR BENNETT—The great attraction in these parts, at the present moment, is a Camp Meeting, held at Long Hill, about four miles from this place.

The sight was truly beautiful after dark, for on all the trees innumerable lamps were hung, which flashing upon the rural beauties present, formed a scene perfectly enchanting.

NIBLO'S GARDENS.—This evening is set apart for the benefit of the proprietor of this highly popular place of amusement, and we feel confident that his friends will muster in full force on such an interesting occasion.

CHATHAM THEATRE.—This elegant little establishment is running a round of unvaried success, notwithstanding the intense heat of the weather.

FRANKLIN THEATRE.—This little temple of Thalia is nightly filled with a merry group of the Bowery boys, who say that Dinneford is the Prince of Managers.

CENSUS OF BUFFALO.—The population of the city of Buffalo, according to the returns of the Marshal, is 18,256.

CORONER'S OFFICE.—August 23.—An inquest was held at No. 39 Ann street, on the body of a negro woman, named Jane Smith, aged 63.

SAD ACCIDENT.—Wm. Davis, formerly of Johnston (R. I.) who sailed from Saratoga, (Mass.) on the 10th of Feb. 1838, on board the S. S. Ship of War Eric, and after a cruise of nearly three years, returned safe into Boston harbor, while performing his duty left, fell from the fore-top-sail yard, and striking against the swinging boom, was instantly killed.

A queer circumstance occurred the other day at Apalachicola. The mayor of the city and all the aldermen had left the city, and the people, considering that they had abdicated the government, proceeded, in their sovereign capacity, to "provide new guards for their future security."

SUICIDE.—A young man named Grim, who lived near the Liberty road, a few miles from this place, hung himself in the woods on Sunday last. No cause is known. He was a young man of excellent deportment.—Fred. Md. Ex.
